COVID-19 Collection

“Our COVID-19 Collection brings together titles from across the social sciences putting aside disciplinary boundaries when considering such a significant global challenge for our society.”

VICTORIA PITTMAN, HEAD OF COMMISSIONING, BRISTOL UNIVERSITY PRESS

Our COVID-19 Collection has emerged in response to the global coronavirus crisis and brings together world-leading research from across the social sciences on the impacts of COVID-19 across our societies.

Featuring expert authors from across academia and civil society, books in our COVID-19 Collection provide new ideas for alternative paths to social change, prompted by key questions that have emerged during the pandemic.

Titles in the collection encourage broader perspectives and collaborations, across global and disciplinary boundaries, and include all book types, from accessible Shorts to research monographs. They are available in print and digital formats.

If you are interested in contributing to the COVID-19 Collection and want to find out more, please get in touch with the Commissioning Editor for your subject area. If you think your work is particularly timely and could benefit from a shorter turnaround, you may be interested in our new Rapid Responses (see page 7 onwards).

Life After COVID-19: The Other Side of Crisis

Edited by Martin Parker, University of Bristol and the Inclusive Economy Initiative

"We owe a duty to those who have suffered and died from COVID-19 to use the opportunity to rethink how we organise our society. Parker has gathered a diverse and insightful range of experts to help us do just that."

What might the world look like in the aftermath of COVID-19?

Almost every aspect of society will change after the pandemic, but if we learn lessons then life can be better. Featuring expert authors from across academia and civil society, this book offers ideas that might put us on alternative paths for positive social change.

A rapid intervention into current commentary and debate, Life After COVID-19 looks at a wide range of topical issues including the state, cooperation, work, money, travel and care. It invites us to see the pandemic as a dress rehearsal for the larger problem of climate change, and it provides an opportunity to think about what we can improve and how rapidly we can make changes.

"Swift reactions to urgent issues require different publishing models. This collection allows writers and readers to connect quickly."

MARTIN PARKER, UNIVERSITY OF BRISTOL AND THE INCLUSIVE ECONOMY INITIATIVE

Cities and Communities Beyond COVID-19

How Local Leadership Can Change Our Future for the Better

Robin Hambleton, University of the West of England and Urban Answers

Foreword by Marvin Rees, Mayor of Bristol

“Makes a passionate case for the importance of place-based leadership in post-pandemic reconstruction. A must-read guide to putting people and planet first.”

DAVID TOWELL, CENTRE FOR INCLUSIVE FUTURES

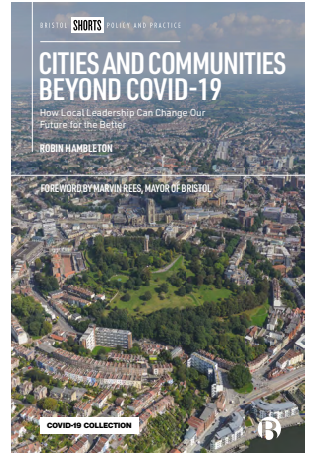

“Helps us move constructively through the uneven challenges and manifold dilemmas that policymakers and everyday citizens are experiencing during the pandemic.”

VALERIA FEDELI, POLITECNICO DI MILANO

The COVID-19 outbreak has shone a light on ways we must adapt in order to create better, more inclusive and sustainable societies for the future. However, many suggestions for the future of society and the planet are aimed at national governments and international bodies.

Drawing on a decade of research by an internationally renowned expert, this book focuses on how cities and communities can lead the way in developing recovery strategies that promote social, economic and environmental justice.

It offers new thinking tools for civic leaders and activists as well as practical suggestions on how we can co-create a more inclusive post-COVID-19 future for us all.

Emergency Powers in a Time of Pandemic

Alan Greene

"Greene places the chaos and maelstrom of 2020 within the wider literature on rights and the state of exception. And he does so in an accessible book!"

FERGAL DAVIS, DICKSON POON SCHOOL OF LAW, KING'S COLLEGE LONDON

How do we maintain core values and rights when governments impose restrictive measures on our lives?

Declaring a state of emergency is the best way to protect public health in a pandemic but how do these powers differ from those for national security and economic crises?

This book explores how human rights, democracy and the rule of law can be protected during a pandemic and how emergency powers can best be ended once it wanes.

Written by an expert on constitutional law and human rights, this accessible book will shape how governments, opposition, courts and society as a whole view future pandemic emergency powers.

Policing the Pandemic

How Public Health Becomes Public Order

Lambros Fatsis, University of Brighton and Melayna Lamb, independent writer and academic.

The COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted the inadequacies of the state's response to public health and public order issues through deeply flawed legislation.

Written in the context of the #BlackLivesMatter protests, this book explores why law enforcement responses to a public health emergency are prioritised over welfare provision and what this tells us about the state's criminal justice institutions.

Informing scholarly, civic and activist thinking on the political nature of policing, it reveals how increasing police powers disproportionately affect black people and suggests alternative ways of designing public safety beyond a law enforcement context.

The Impact of COVID-19 on Devolution

Re-centralising the British State Beyond Brexit?

Janice Morphet, Bartlett School of Planning

April 2021

The COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted the practical challenges of UK devolution through the delivery of support to those affected by the virus.

Morphet explores how the public perception of the decentralized governments has changed during the pandemic and uses case studies to discuss the actions taken by central government to undermine the devolution statement.

She assesses how the role of local government in supporting communities has been forced to evolve despite cuts from central government and makes a vital contribution to the debate on the future options for the UK within the context of Brexit and what follows.

Rapid Responses

“The need to respond quickly and authoritatively to rapidly evolving social issues, and policy and practice challenges, has never been greater and our new digital Rapid Responses do just that. A new production process enables publication within six weeks of submission so that our author’s work can inform social change as it evolves.”

ALISON SHAW, CEO, BRISTOL UNIVERSITY PRESS

Social issues regularly arise that require swift social commentary interventions in order to influence thinking and rapidly inform research, policy and practice. Our current Rapid Responses focus on the COVID-19 pandemic and the challenges we face in the immediate future. As the series evolves, authors will have the opportunity to publish on ongoing global social issues.

If you are researching the COVID-19 pandemic and think that your work would be a good fit for either a Rapid Response or longer form Research Short in the COVID-Collection please get in touch with the Commissioning Editor for your subject area. If your research is on highly topical global issues that would benefit from fast publication to allow it to make an immediate impact then our Rapid Responses format allows you an opportunity to publish quickly.”

“Lots of credit to Bristol University Press and Policy Press for working at warp speed to get these e-books out quickly for the global research community.”

HELEN KARA, WE RESEARCH IT LTD

Researching in the Age of COVID-19

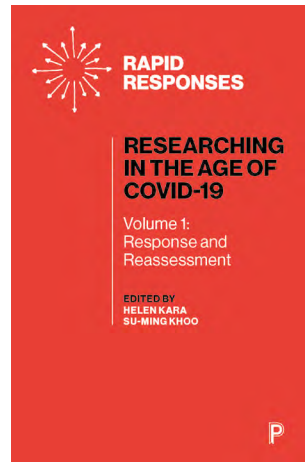

This trio of Rapid Responses helps academic, applied and practitioner researchers worldwide adapt to the new challenges that COVID-19 presents for conducting research. From having to change data collection methods, to rethinking researcher-researched relationships and fostering researcher resilience, researchers have responded to this new landscape in diverse, thoughtful and creative ways. Together, these books provide an essential guide for doing research in the age of COVID-19 and beyond.

Researching in the Age of COVID-19

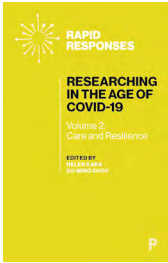

Volume I: Response and Reassessment

Edited by Helen Kara, We Research It Ltd. and Su-ming Khoo, National University of Ireland Galway

The first book in this series showcases new methods and emerging approaches for conducting research in the context of COVID-19. It has three parts: the first looks at the turn to digital methods; the second reviews methods in hand; and the final part reassesses different needs and capabilities for researchers and participants.

This volume explores how creativity and ethics are intertwined when conducting research in the context of COVID-19.

It looks at the practice of engaged research and co-creation and shows researchers how to negotiate new and evolving ethical challenges.

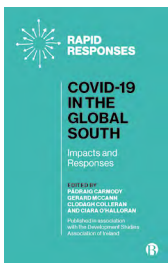

Social Work and the COVID-19 Pandemic International Insights

Edited by Michael Lavalette, Liverpool Hope University, Vasilios Ioakimidis, University of Essex and Iain Ferguson, University of West Scotland

This book provides an urgent critical exploration of how global social work can and should respond to COVID-19. It explores the ecological, epidemiological, ideological and political conditions which gave rise to the pandemic, before examining the ways that social work has responded in different nations across the Global North and Global South. This series of nation studies examines good practices and suggests new ways to renew and regenerate social work moving on from COVID-19.

Publish with Bristol University Press

Bristol University Press, and its imprint Policy Press, is committed to publishing the highest-quality scholarship in the social sciences and aligned disciplines. We want our work to make a positive contribution, from the advancement of ideas through to practical implementation.

As a not-for-profit publisher we share many of the same values as the organisations and individuals we work with, and we pride ourselves on our collaborative ethos, commitment to quality and outstanding author care.

Publishing for Impact

From Policy Press's inception in 1996, we have worked with authors to maximise the impact of their work within and beyond academia to governments, policy makers, professionals, practitioners, journalists and the wider public. We provide practical support to authors to enable their work to influence positive social change.

How to Publish with Us

To find out more about publishing your work with us and to download our proposal guidelines, browse our Author Hub and download our Why Publish with Us? flyer.

Make Your Research Go Further

We are committed to helping important research reach the widest possible audiences. Our Transforming Society and Futures of Work online magazines are innovative spaces that enable authors and others to maximise the impact of their work.

Transforming Society

Transforming Society

Our Transforming Society online magazine is a bold space for our authors, and others in our community, to make incisive interventions into topical news, debates and dialogues through articles, interviews, briefings for policy makers, case studies and podcasts. It celebrates new research and researchers at any stage in their career, from anywhere across the globe, and is a space to share new thinking and help shape our understanding of the biggest challenges our societies face.

Futures of Work

FUTURES OF WORK

A space for radical critiques of the changing world of work, Futures of Work is an online magazine that hosts long-form opinion pieces, debates and thought-provoking podcasts, contributing to the wide-ranging debate on ongoing and emerging issues associated with work and employment.

Discover Society
